A MYSTERIOUS MODEL. - Ou my return from Europe, says a correspondent of the Kansas City Times. I became a member of the Artistic League in New York city and had a studio next to Hartley, the soulptor. While looking about for a model I heard of a lady who had the reputation of having a wonderfully fine figure, and who would be apt to be willing to serve as a model, since she was very poor and out of employment. I sent her a request to call at my studio. She did so, accompanied by a friend, a lady petite in figure, but with a lovely face. The lady I had sent my card to told me she had just found employment, and could not, therefore, serve me, but her friend, whom she introduced as Mrs. Wood, had consented to act an a model for me, provideded she proved satisfac ory. I told Mrs. Wood that it was customary for artists to inspect their models before engaging their services; would she retire to the auto-room and remove her apparel? She eaid she would recure the next day and submit to the inspection. Next day she returned, looking very pale and nervous. She evidently dreaded the ordeal of appearing in the nude state. Hartley was in the studio with me, and we spoke kindly to her and bade her dismiss her sgitation. When she stepped out of the ante-room she presented a picture that was a feast to our eyes; we agreed that she was one of the most perfectly formed creatures we had ever seen. Her neck, shoulders, torso and limbs were models of thems lves, while ber face, in womanly sweetness and artistic regularity was matchless. When she had ularity was matchless. one: more attired hers it I told her it would be a week before I would be able to give her employment. When she heard this her eyes field with tears. I saw there was some grief troubling her. I asked her if she was suffering; if she needed money. Then she told her story; she was the wife of a gentleman who for several years had been a correspondent of the New York Herald in Europe; his health had become impaired; he had returned home and was now lying sick in bed at their boarding place. They were very poor and the wife had determined to do something for their support. She wept as she told me her story, and I saw she was sincere. I gave her $10 as a loan and sent her with a note of introduction to Church. the artist, knowing that he would give her employment in his young ladies' class I was successful in my efforts. Church was delighted with her figure, and for sometimeshe made $7 a day posing as a model before the ladies' class. She retained her non de plume of Mrs. Wood, and her identity was never discovered. The ladies tried in every way to discovered who she way, but never succeeded. She always appeared before them in a nucle state and after her studies she would in a nude state and after her studies she would slip into her room and dress and steal out of the building surreptitiously. She bicame a popular model and continued to earn a large compatence till her hu-band got well and was able to renew work. Taen she retired from the field as a model Her husband knew how she had made money during his illness, but he never mention ed it to me; his gratefulness, however, for my favor was manifested in a thousand delicate You would be surprised to hear his WAVE name. He is a writer well known in New York.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S mother married her fath er four years after the death of her first hasband, the Prince of Lainingen. The Dake, prior to the marriage had been living at Brussels in a house rented for $1,500 a year from an English Admiral, and made frequent excursions into Germany. They were married at Coburg. on May 29, 1818, secording to Lutheran rices, and the marriage was resolemnized at Kew ac cording to those of the Church of England, They remained but a short time in England. and then went to Amorbach, where the Duchess had been residing as guardian of her son and regent of his principality. When the Duchese became enceinte, Alderman Wood (grandfather of Sir Evelyn, the Zululand hero), who was twice Lord Mayor of London, and an eminent liberal, was from patriotic feelings, desirous that a child probably destined to be sovereiga should be born on British soil, and therefore tried to induce the trustees of the Duke's estate, then insolvent, to advance enough money to enable him to return. They decined, and he himself advanced it. It was not repaid for years. The Queen, it is said, on account of this generosity created him a baronet. "I have discovered a remedy for consumption. It has cured a number of cases after they had commenced bleeding at the lungs and the heeric flush was already on the check. After trying this remedy to my own satisfaction, I have thought that philanthropy required that I should let it be known to the world. It is common mullen, steeped strongly and sweetened with offee sugar, and drunk freely. Young or old plants are good, dried in the shade and kept in clean bage. The medicine must be continued from three to six months, according to the nature of the disease. It is very good for the blood vessels also. It s'rengthens and builds up the system instead of taking away the strength. It makes good b'ood and takes inflammation away from the lungs." It is the wish of the writer that every periodical in the United States, Canada and Europe should publish this recipe for the benefit of the human family. Lay this up and keep it in the house ready for use.
